

Musings of a Madwoman: A Collection of poems

This collection of poems was inspired by events either witnessed or experienced. Sometimes a period in a persons life can engender actions and responses we least of all expect with outcomes that surprise or horrify our conscious mind so much so that it retreats deep within to recover. This is more commonly known as a mental illness and is an unseen destroyer of lives and the people we once were. All it takes is something unexpectedly traumatic to send us off on a journey into the unknown physically or mentally. Sometimes those journeys are hard to return from because the memories are too strong, too painful to let go. It is a long, hard, and time laden road to travel back to humanity. Poetry as found here remains one means of addressing and putting into perspective such events.
