

We Are Gods Upon The Road: Annihilation of Creation and Choice

A being of great power and wisdom is to create a new world. Monad, acknowledged as the first God by the ancient Gnostics, wanders along a wooded path with his two dim but very lovable companions. In a moment of perfect inspiration, Monad proclaims himself a god upon the road and embarks upon the creation of everything. Though satirical, We Are Gods Upon The Road offers a very creative universal origin tale. Monad isn't very smart and his two companions, Crow and Hare, border on the ridiculous, always perfectly innocent in their antics. Monad's great intentions often have unplanned consequences but the ties to actual history become quite uncanny. Worlds seem to be created from the folly of another where beings from three domains are bonded together in spirit, looking for Truth and staying alive the best they can.
