

Fierce Companion

The pit bull smiles with smug contentment. Smug in the face of the fact he has become utterly useless in this world, smug in the face of a world with no use for him. His quality is hidden; he no longer displays any of the traits of his extensive breeding. He smiles smugly, displaying subtly in his grin the quality he knows he possesses and others lack. He is game. He knows they can do nothing to make him stop, to take away his will. He looks up at the world in a veiled contempt. His eyes look up to the side and his head stays down, holding on to his seemingly useless gift and waiting for the day when the world needs it, needs him again.
