

Leaving Social Work (Laying The Foundation Book 1)

It has been said if you keep doing what you've always done you'll keep getting what you've always got. Today, due to the economic downturn we are exposed to a more for less work environment. The helping professions have been hardest hit. Social Workers, nurses and others in this sector have been hit the hardest, they have seen an increase in their workload and a decrease in pay and working conditions. Leaving Social Work is for anyone who needs to explore a lifestyle alternative and needs a buffer between them and the thirty day demon i.e. bills and commitments. Those who want to work to live not live to work with more time available for their friends, partners and loved ones. Leaving Social Work is aimed at assisting you to monetize your knowledge i.e. Psychologists create additional income streams by writing self-help books. Nurses, social workers and others have a vast data base of knowledge which if used properly can be turned into additional revenue of income. The book teaches you how to create an additional income stream by creating a product or service people need and are looking for. If you happen to have an interest or passion in this area then you are best placed to help and assist. Of course the information is only useful if applied and used to assist others. This economy has given us the ideal opportunity to make the needed changes to improve our lives and gain increased freedom. My question to you is: If not now, then when?
