Excerpt: ...by Washington as first judge of the Federal District Court for Delaware; John Dickinson, a delegate to Congress, an upright judge, the author of the celebrated Letters of a Farmer, and of the Declaration issued by Congress in 1775,¹ and lately President of the Annapolis Convention. It was while he was a member of the Supreme Council of Pennsylvania that its legislature founded the college that bears his name. In his letters to the people, over the signature of Farmer, he urged the ratification of the Constitution. This State also sent Richard Basset, a member of Congress, and of the Annapolis Convention, United States Senator, Chief Justice of the State, Governor, and United States Circuit Judge; also Jacob Broom, a much respected citizen.² From Maryland the delegates were James McHenry, a member of Washingtons military family, of the senate of Maryland, and, at the same time, of the Continental Congress, and later, Secretary of War under Washington; Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, President of the Council of Safety of his State, delegate to Congress, and a member of the Commission appointed by Maryland to join with the Commission from Virginia to settle the jurisdiction over Chesapeake Bay. It was this commission which adjourned to Mt. Vernon, conferred. there with Washington on national needs and made that report leading to the calling of the Federal Convention. Maryland also sent 1 The Delaware delegates were commissioned by the Governor, April 2, 1787, under the act of the Legislature of February 3, 1787. Fords List, p. 9. See the chapter, post, on The Constitution in Delaware, for their services in the Delaware ratifying convention. 2 Pennsylvania and Delaware were the only States all of whose delegates attended and signed the...
