

Right Side of the Wrong Bed

Breaking all the rules . . . At thirty-three, Kenny Kane seems to have it all: good looks, a great career as a university administrator, a silver BMW, a sprawling home in the tony hills of Monterey Park, and a hot firefighter for a boyfriend-that is until he cheats on Kenny with a woman! After devoting the past seven years of his life to his ex, the last thing Kenny needs is to get involved with someone new. So when he meets Jeremy Lopez at a West Hollywood bar, Kenny is content to just buy him a drink and leave it at that. Is the only way to go . . . But Jeremy wont take no for an answer. Six feet tall, dressed in baggy, low-rise jeans and sporting plenty of bling, Jeremy is straight-up East L. A Hes also a mere twenty-one-years-old-and Latino. Except for the one white boy back in college, Kennys always dated other African-American men. When it comes to getting what you want . . . But he cant deny the chemistry between them. And before he knows it, Kennys having the time of his life-hanging with Jeremy and his boys . . . clubbing and hitting the frat parties . . . feeling like a kid again. But how long can a thirty-something like Kenny keep it up? And is he really gonna find what hes been looking for with a kid like Jeremy-or will Kenny wake up feeling like hes on the right side of the wrong bed? Reads like real life . . . this smart and touching novel just wont entertain you. Itll make you think and perhaps even remember -Black Artemis, author of Burn Funny, touching, and intoxicating. Smith has written yet another compulsive read -Maurice Jamal, writer and director of Dirty Laundry and The Ski Trip Originally from Detroit, Michigan, Frederick Smith is a graduate of the Missouri School of Journalism and Loyola University Chicago. He lives in Los Angeles and is also the author of Down For Whatever.
